

If I want to buy something I have a phone to call the seller of that product. I feel it is very disruptive to my life to get calls from people selling something I have absolutely no interest in. Even when you tell the caller not to call back a week later the same company is calling again. Everyone I have talked to hates getting those calls and does not want the law to be changed. I feel if you want the calls you can put your name on a call me list and in this way they can get calls and I can be left alone.
